LEADING THE WAY

OneWorldNow! (OWN) helps launch the remarkable new generation of global leaders by offering after-school and summer language programs in Mandarin and other languages, leadership workshops, study abroad opportunities, and community service learning to high school students in Seattle, Washington. From its inception in 2002, the organization has recognized the importance of learning Mandarin language and made it part of its core program, along with building social, emotional, and intercultural skills.

With the support of Confucius Institute of the State of Washington, OneWorldNow! has been able to expand its reach to underserved, multiculturally diverse youth to learn Mandarin and prepare for their future in a new globalized, multi-national workforce. With leadership development a major part of the curriculum, students advise on program content and help design the practice of cross-cultural communication.

In this book, we show you the real people — students, teachers, and leaders — engaged in this promising educational experience, which cultivates a new generation of leaders who speak Mandarin and are ready to tackle the challenges they encounter in the social community and world that they inherit.

CELEBRATING THE NEW YEAR

CONFUCIUS INSTITUTE

Every year the Confucius Institute supports teachers across the state in their Chinese Lunar New Year celebrations for students with community members. This is an important way to educate about Chinese cultural traditions and values.
